

MOUNT VICTORIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY NEWS

No. 6, JUNE 1997

❖ JUNE EVENT

MOUNT VICTORIA'S MARITIME CONNECTIONS

An illustrated talk by Roger Carter (Wellington Maritime Museum)

Sunday June 22nd at 3-00pm.

Crossways Community House, Brougham St.

Refreshments to follow.

Roger Carter is ex Royal Navy and an ex Wellington Harbour Board Berthing Master, who nowadays does occasional work for the Maritime Museum. This will be an entertaining talk about the old maritime signal station on top of Mt Victoria and the development of the Clyde Quay Boat Harbour area, including the Port Nicholson Yacht Club.

❖ AUGUST EVENT

We are currently organising a trip to the Film Archive, Cable Street, in late August. The staff will be showing us around the archive facilities and screening some specially selected film clips that relate to our area of interest, eg early military parades at the Basin Reserve. There will be a small charge for this trip. For further details see our next newsletter and the Mt Victoria Newsletter.

❖ RECENT ACTIVITIES

St Gerard's Monastery

On the Saturday 26th April about 45 people visited St Gerard's Monastery. We were given an extensive tour of the building, inner chapel, main church and grounds by Charles Hannaford, Director of the International Catholic Programme of Evangelisation, ending with a talk about the ICPE mission work by Ruth Bond.

The ICPE has just commissioned local Conservation Architect Chris Cochran to do a Conservation Plan for the monastery. Happily the ICPE are committed to maintaining and repairing the buildings whilst making internal changes to adapt the buildings to its new purpose – ie that of a residential training mission. The building has a Category 1 classification under the 1993 Historic Places Act, meaning that it is a "place of special or outstanding historical or cultural significance or value". It is also listed in the Wellington City Council's District Plan.

Some conservation work has already been done on this building. In the mid 1980's strengthening was done on the roof and floor of the church and the whole building exterior was given a waterproof coating. Unfortunately this coating is now causing condensation problems for the building interior.

Current restoration problems that need addressing include - the buckling and colour deterioration of the beautiful stained glass church windows, aging plumbing and electric wiring, and deteriorating exterior brick and wood work. Installing a fire protection system is also a priority.

The ICPE has recently received funds for conservation work from the Wellington City Council and Lottery Grants Board, and is currently exploring others avenues of funding.

It is interesting to see a photo in the conservation plan booklet of the old Hawker Street entrance before the car parking platform was installed in 1970/71. It shows an outer low wrought iron fence and an imposing interior brick fence with a grand double door entrance to the main building.

The only other major alteration to the monastery since it was built, was the filling in of the second and third storey cloisters on the west side. It has been suggested that the original building plan was based on a recently completed monastery in Brisbane, and it does indeed resemble the said building. However the differences in the climate between Brisbane and Wellington were not taken into account, resulting in the open verandahs being quickly glazed in.

The monastery was built with the new technique of cast in situ reinforced concrete, with a brick exterior cladding and plastered interior finish. The City Council of the day, presumably thinking of earthquakes, insisted the building be of reinforced concrete rather than the proposed load bearing brick.

It is interesting to note that the name monastery is a misnomer because the Redemptorists were not monks engaged in prayer and contemplation, but concentrated on missionary work and visited parishes throughout the country.

Despite the amazing views from building site most of the bottom panes of glass in the windows were opaque and you can't see anything at all through them. The amazing views were not allowed to distract the monastery inhabitants from their work and prayers.

Sermons from St Gerard's were broadcast on the national radio from the 1920's until mid 1960's. It was also a civil defence centre during World War 2. With changes in the Catholic Church, the monastery became a parish in 1965. By 1988 there were only 4 priests and 3 brothers left in the building that was meant to house more than twenty people. With increasing costs of heating, maintenance and rates, the Redemptorists decided to sell the building. The ICPE conditionally purchased the monastery in September 1990, whilst the WCC later purchased the surrounding land for $1 million.

The ICPE recently opened the monastery to the public for the day. They intend holding more open days in the future